Can bullying in schools be combated?

Undoubtedly, the phenomenon of bullying is an existing problem over the last years. Many will agree and question how to cope and act towards it.

One cannot help but feel disappointment, anger, insecurity and even appallingness. Witnessing such an incident provokes these kinds of feelings. After all who would want to be in that person's shoes?

Each individual is different which means that there is no specific way to deal with it. Most certainly, though, punishment is not the only answer to the problem. There is more to this than can be seen.

Can this phenomenon be stopped? First and foremost awareness is one way to overcome this. Placing psychologists in schools so as for students to have someone to turn to will certainly enhance the situation. Besides this a cooperation of not only teachers but parents as well would boost students' self- confidence.

Truly speaking, bullying is a serious phenomenon that can't be ignored. However, focusing on the core of the problem allows us to hope that it will gradually fade away.
