Lt Col Arnaud Beltram, the police officer who switched himself for a hostage during the French supermarket attack last Friday, died last Saturday morning, bringing the number of victims to four. Police shot dead the attacker after a series of attacks claimed by Islamic State in Carcassonne, southern France that ended in the three-hour hostage-

taking

The attacker, named as Radouane Lakdim, 25, was born in Morocco and lived in Carcassonne. He was known to the police for minor crimes and drug-dealing. The state lawyer Francois Molins said that Lakdim had been being watched and recorded in 2016 and 2017 for his "radicalism and closeness to Islamic movements" but had showed no signs he was going to carry out an attack. Questions will be asked as to how Lakdim was able to get a weapon and carry out attacks when he had been watched by the security services. The interior minister, Gerard Collomb, said: "We had watched him and did not think he had been radicalized and would take any action."

Just after 10am on Friday, Lakdim stopped a white Opel Corsa car on the outer areas of Carcassonne, before shooting and killing the passenger and seriously hurting the driver. The lawyer said Lakdim then drove off in the car and appeared to wait outside a military building. He then drove to a police squad building and shot at four officers 200 metres away who had been out jogging. He seriously wounded one of the men in the group, who suffered broken ribs and a punctured lung. A bullet struck near the officer's heart.
