

The background of the slide is a large, irregular shape representing the map of the United States. This shape is filled with a dense collage of small, colorful images from the 20th century. These images include various scenes of American life: soldiers in uniform, industrial factories, cityscapes, people in social settings, and technological advancements like early automobiles and airplanes. The collage is set against a dark background with faint, large stars in the upper left corner, reminiscent of the American flag. Overlaid on this collage is the text 'What Did Americans Use To Do In The 20th century?'. The words 'What', 'Americans', 'Do', 'In', and 'century?' are in white, while 'Did' and 'Use To' are in a bright green color. A white horizontal line is positioned below the word 'century?'.
